Round two - Research about the implementation of the NDIS in the early childhood intervention sector in NSW

Researchers at UNSW Sydney (The University of New South Wales) are looking for parents or family members to take part in the second round of surveys about the transition of early childhood intervention services to the NDIS. The survey is part of research being done for Early Childhood Intervention Australia NSW/ACT.

Who can take part in the survey?

You can take part in the survey if you:

- Are the parent or family member of a child receiving early intervention services
- Live in NSW

How do I take part?

If you decide to take part, please complete the survey via the following link:

<http://www.surveygizmo.com/s3/3888877/Family-experiences-ECIA-Survey-transition-to-the-NDIS-in-NSW-Round-2>

This survey should take around 10 to 15 minutes to complete.

What will you use the information for?

The survey and the research it is part of, aims to help children and families who are using early childhood intervention services through the NDIS – by taking part in the survey, you are helping us with this aim.

There is no payment for taking part in the survey.

Who do I contact if I want more information about this survey or the research it is part of?
